BUSINESS DESCRIPTION

In 1931, after immigrating from Collodi, Italy and working as a laborer for over a decade at the (no longer extant) San Francisco Wholesale Produce Market, Pietro Dante Pizza decided to open his own wholesale produce business at 217 Washington Street, and named it the Washington Vegetable Company after the street on which it was located. Pizza had three sons – John, Louis, and Renato – who worked in the mornings, before going to school, and would later return after WWII to work full-time in the family business. The business was growing, and in 1956, the company moved to a larger warehouse at 135-137 Washington Street (which is now the site of Maritime Plaza Park). Less than a decade later, the Golden Gateway Redevelopment Project was approved, and the merchants of the old Produce Market had to find new real estate for their wholesale operations. Many merchants chose to leave the city and open the Golden Gate Produce Terminal in South San Francisco, but Washington Vegetable Company felt strongly about staying in the city. Washington Vegetable Company, among a handful of other produce dealers, relocated to Jerrold Avenue where the company has remained for the last 57 years.

Washington Vegetable is one of the largest produce wholesalers in San Francisco and its supply of fresh fruit and vegetables fuels the cultural heritage of San Francisco's foodways. Washington Vegetable's dedication and perseverance to the city's wholesale produce and family-owned operations is evident in its ownership history. The company has stayed in the Pizza family and is currently in its third generation of ownership, and fourth generation of family-member operations.

Since the early part of the 20th century, the wholesale produce merchants of San Francisco have been the primary source of fresh fruits and vegetables for the city and the Bay Area at large. The city's close proximity to some of the most productive produce growing regions in the country (Salinas, Central Valley, etc.) has helped form the Bay Area's identity as one of the culinary capitals of the world and a place on the cutting edge of many healthy, plant-based food trends. Washington Vegetable is one of the oldest members of the San Francisco Wholesale Produce Market and has a strong relationship with the area's local-based grocers and restaurants. Their regular customer base in San Francisco includes Gus's Community Markets, Mollie Stones, El Chico Market, La Loma Market, Casa Maria, Marina Supermarket, Nature Stop, Hayes Valley Whole Foods, 22nd and Irving Market, Noriega Produce, Del Rio Produce, New May Wah, Brayan's Market, the Good Life Markets, Chubby Noodle, Espetus Churrasceria, and Underdog Tacos; in addition to numerous corner store merchants, startup subscription companies, and stores outside of the city (such as Berkeley Bowl). Washington Vegetable also gives back to the community, regularly donating fresh fruits and vegetables to a variety of charities and food banks. Since it began the Food Recovery Program in 2016, Washington Vegetable has donated 145,692 pounds of produce to those in need.

CRITERION 1

Has the applicant operated in San Francisco for 30 or more years, with no break in San Francisco operations exceeding two years?

Yes, Washington Vegetable Company has operated in San Francisco for 30 or more years, with no break in San Francisco operations exceeding two years:

217 Washington Street from 1931 to 1956 (25 years)
135-137 Washington Street from 1956 to 1963 (7 years)
2035 Jerrold Avenue from 1963 to Present (57 years)

CRITERION 2

Has the applicant contributed to the neighborhood's history and/or the identity of a particular neighborhood or community?

Yes, Washington Vegetable has contributed to the history and identity of the Bayview neighborhood and San Francisco.

The Historic Preservation Commission recommended the applicant as qualifying, noting the following ways the applicant contributed to the neighborhood's history and/or the identity of a particular neighborhood or community:

- The business is associated with wholesale agricultural crafts and produce market traditions.
- Washington Vegetable Company is the oldest member of the San Francisco Wholesale Produce Market, and the structure at 2035 Jerrold Avenue is age-eligible for evaluation but has not been reviewed for its individual significance or its potential inclusion within as a historic or cultural district. A Historic Resource Evaluation is outside the scope of this review.
- There have been a number of features and articles on Washington Vegetable Company in The Packer and The Produce News, which highlights trends in the industry. The business president, Jack, has also been interviewed multiple times by local media outlets for stories about the produce industry; particularly during times of high process, shortages, or recalls of certain products.

CRITERION 3

Is the applicant committed to maintaining the physical features or traditions that define the business, including craft, culinary, or art forms?

Yes, Washington Vegetable is committed to maintaining the physical features and traditions that define the business.

HISTORIC PRESERVATION COMMISSION RECOMMENDATION

The Historic Preservation Commission recommends that Washington Vegetable Company qualifies for the Legacy Business Registry under Administrative Code Section 2A.242(b)(2) and recommends safeguarding of the below listed physical features and traditions.

Physical Features or Traditions that Define the Business:

- Location within San Francisco's Wholesale Produce Terminal / Market in the Bayview neighborhood.
- Maintain the business as an essential and longstanding source of blue-collar employment within the industrial and PDR (Production, Distribution and Repair) sector of District 10.
- Remaining true to its roots as a traditional produce wholesaler, providing vegetables to grocery stores and restaurants in the Bay Area.

- Safeguard documentation related to the business’s history and current operations, including photos, paintings, the former business sign (that once hung above the business’s stall at the old market) trinkets that pay homage to the business’s past and growing future.
- Retain the business’s mural, which was commissioned and completed by a local artist, that depicts Washington Vegetable as it looked in the old (no longer extant) produce market.
- Continue to donate to the Food Recovery Program and other philanthropic food bank organizations.
- Maintain the “Washington Vegetable” name, as homage to the business’s history.

CORE PHYSICAL FEATURE OR TRADITION THAT DEFINES THE BUSINESS

Following is the core physical feature or tradition that defines the business that would be required for maintenance of the business on the Legacy Business Registry.

- Distributor of produce.

STAFF RECOMMENDATION

Staff recommends that the San Francisco Small Business Commission include Washington Vegetable Company currently located at 2035 Jerrold Avenue in the Legacy Business Registry as a Legacy Business under Administrative Code Section 2A.242.

Director Regina Dick-Endrizzi
San Francisco Office of Small Business
City Hall, Room 110
1 Dr. Carlton B. Goodlett Place
San Francisco, CA 94102

Dear Director Regina Dick-Endrizzi,

I am writing to nominate the Washington Vegetable Company for inclusion on the Legacy Business Registry.

The purpose of the City's Legacy Business Registry is to recognize that longstanding, community-serving businesses can be valuable cultural assets of the City. Per ordinance, a business must be nominated by the Mayor or a member of the Board of Supervisors to be reviewed, processed, and approved by the Small Business Commission as a Legacy Business at a public hearing if it meets the criteria set forth.

Originally founded in 1931, the Washington Vegetable Company has been a family-owned San Francisco institution for nearly a century. The company has been a vital supplier of fresh produce to stores around San Francisco and the larger Bay Area for their entire existence. By connecting growers from across California and beyond to our locally-owned grocery stores and restaurants, the Washington Vegetable Company has helped our local businesses serve fresh, quality food and compete with national chains. Additionally, they have been leading participants in the San Francisco Produce Market's food recovery program, ensuring that our waste is minimized and healthy fruits and vegetables are donated to those in need. The Washington Vegetable Company has contributed to the history and identity of our City and has helped foster civic engagement and pride.

It is an honor to recognize the legacy and contributions of the Washington Vegetable Company to our great City of San Francisco.

Sincerely,

London N. Breed
Mayor

WASHINGTON VEGETABLE COMPANY

Section 4: Written Historical Narrative

CRITERION 1

a. Provide a short history of the business from the date the business opened in San Francisco to the present day, including the ownership history. For businesses with multiple locations, include the history of the original location in San Francisco (including whether it was the business's founding and or headquartered location) and the opening dates and locations of all other locations.

Washington Vegetable Company was established in 1931 and is the oldest wholesale produce business located in the City and County of San Francisco.

After immigrating from Collodi, Italy in 1920, Pietro Dante Pizza began working at the old San Francisco Wholesale Produce Market near the corner of Davis and Washington streets in what is now the Financial District of San Francisco. Many Italian immigrants worked at the produce market due to the fact that many of the companies were owned by Italians. Families such as the Lippis, Tocchinis and Gallis were major figures at the original SF Produce Market.

In 1931, after working as a laborer for a decade, Dante opened his own wholesale produce business at 217 Washington Street and named it Washington Vegetable Company after the street on which it was located. Dante's three sons – John, Louis, and Renato – worked with their father while in school, working early mornings before going to classes. All three sons joined the armed services during WWII, and upon returning from the war began working full time at Washington Vegetable.

In 1956, the company moved to a larger warehouse at 135-137 Washington Street to accommodate the growing business. In 1961, The Golden Gateway Redevelopment Project was approved, and the original San Francisco Produce Market was set to be demolished. The former site of Washington Vegetable Company is currently home to Maritime Plaza Park.

In September of 1963, some of the merchants of the old Wholesale Produce Market moved to a new San Francisco Wholesale Produce Market on Jerrold Avenue in the Bayview area of San Francisco, with the remaining merchants choosing to leave the city and open the Golden Gate Produce Terminal located in South San Francisco. Included in the Legacy Business Registry application is the original lease signed by John, Louis and Renato Pizza for 2035 Jerrold Avenue, where the company has remained for the last 57 years.

The three brothers continued to work together, with John becoming the president of Washington Vegetable Company. During this time, John also became president of the Wholesale Fruit and Produce Dealers Association of San Francisco, which is the governing body of the merchants of the SF Produce Market. This is a title John held through three separate decades.

The early days after the move to the new terminal were not easy for the merchants, as many of their customers chose to patronize the produce wholesalers who had relocated to the new produce terminal in South San Francisco. John's leadership helped Washington Vegetable persevere through a time when many companies who had relocated to the San Francisco Wholesale Produce Market were forced to shut their doors.

After Renato retired in 1980 and Louis in 1988, John became the sole owner of Washington Vegetable Company.

John's son Jack gained familiarity with Washington Vegetable Company starting in high school, when he would work summers and occasionally before school. In 1994, after working as an attorney for 12 years, Jack returned to Washington Vegetable Company.

In 2003, John retired and his son Jack took over as owner and president. Jack is currently the sole owner and President of Washington Vegetable Company. Jack used his background as a lawyer to assist the merchants as they negotiated a new 60-year lease with the City which commenced in 2013.

b. Describe any circumstances that required the business to cease operations in San Francisco for more than six months?

Washington Vegetable Company has been in continuous operation since its founding.

c. Is the business a family-owned business? If so, give the generational history of the business.

Washington Vegetable Company is a family-owned business. It is now in its third generation of ownership, with a fourth-generation family member working at the business.

Washington Vegetable Company has been owned by the Pizza family since its founding in 1931. It was founded by Pietro Dante Pizza, then passed to his three sons, John, Renato and Louis. John eventually gained a controlling interest, and the business was thereafter passed down to his son Jack. Jack is the current owner and his son Michael works under him. Michael is planning to take over the company once Jack retires, hopefully with his sisters if either chooses to join the business.

d. Describe the ownership history when the business ownership is not the original owner or a family-owned business.

The ownership history of Washington Vegetable Company is as follows:

1931 to 1952:	Pietro Dante Pizza
1952 to 1980:	John Pizza, Renato Pizza and Louis Pizza
1980 to 1988:	John Pizza and Louis Pizza

1988 to 2003: John Pizza
2003 to Present: Jack Pizza

e. When the current ownership is not the original owner and has owned the business for less than 30 years, the applicant will need to provide documentation of the existence of the business prior to current ownership to verify it has been in operation for 30+ years. Please use the list of supplemental documents and/or materials as a guide to help demonstrate the existence of the business prior to current ownership.

Documentation of the existence of the business verifying it has been in operation for 30+ years is provided in this Legacy Business Registry application.

f. Note any other special features of the business location, such as, if the property associated with the business is listed on a local, state, or federal historic resources registry.

The historic resource status of the building at 2035 Jerrold Avenue is classified by the Planning Department as Category B, Unknown / Age Eligible, with regard to the California Environmental Quality Act.

CRITERION 2

a. Describe the business's contribution to the history and/or identity of the neighborhood, community or San Francisco.

Since the early part of the 20th Century, the wholesale produce merchants located in San Francisco have been the primary source of fresh fruits and vegetables for the city of San Francisco and the Bay Area at large. As a large city close to some of the most productive produce growing regions of the country (Salinas, Central Valley), fresh vegetables that come through Washington Vegetable Company from these regions have helped form San Francisco's identity as a culinary capital of the world and a city on the leading edge of many healthy, plant-based food trends.

b. Is the business (or has been) associated with significant events in the neighborhood, the city, or the business industry?

Washington Vegetable Company was one of the original tenants of the old produce market which was located in what is now the Financial District of San Francisco. This move was necessitated by the development of the Golden Gateway Redevelopment Project, which eventually generated 1,400 new housing units, the construction of the 3.5 million square foot Embarcadero Center, and 12 acres of public plazas and open spaces. When the old produce market was closed, some of the tenants moved to a new terminal located in South San Francisco, taking jobs, taxes and business with them. Washington Vegetable Company was one of a group of merchants who demonstrated their commitment to the city of San Francisco and moved to the terminal which is located in the Bayview neighborhood. Washington Vegetable Company actively supports efforts at the San Francisco Wholesale Produce Market to provide healthy food options to some of the needier residents of the Bayview neighborhood and the city at large.

c. Has the business ever been referenced in an historical context? Such as in a business trade publication, media, or historical documents?

Washington Vegetable Company has been featured over the years in trade publications such as The Packer and The Produce News, which highlight trends in the industry. Additionally, Jack, the current president, has been interviewed numerous times by local media outlets for stories about the produce industry, primarily during times of high prices, shortages or recalls for certain products.

d. Is the business associated with a significant or historical person?

Washington Vegetable Company, as the oldest member of the San Francisco Wholesale Produce Market, has been involved with a number of high-profile political figures in San Francisco. John Pizza worked closely with Mayor George Christopher who was the driving force behind the Golden Gate Redevelopment project and the relocation of Washington Vegetable to the new market in Bayview-Hunters point.

e. How does the business demonstrate its commitment to the community?

Washington Vegetable Company has always felt a need to give back to the surrounding community and regularly donates fresh fruits and vegetables to a variety of charities and food banks, including the SF-Marin Food Bank, the Little Sisters of the Poor and a number of Bayview based food distribution centers. The Market has also begun working with the Navigation center that has opened down the street from the Produce Market. Since the beginning of the official Food Recovery Program in 2016, Washington Vegetable has donated 145,692 pounds of produce.

f. Provide a description of the community the business serves.

Washington Vegetable Company serves a variety of fresh fruit and vegetable consumers in the city of San Francisco and the greater Bay Area. Their customer base includes large but locally-based grocery stores located in the city (e.g. Gus's Community Markets and Mollie Stones) and elsewhere in the Bay Area (e.g. Berkeley Bowl, Piazza's Fine Foods and Monterey Market). Washington Vegetable also service many mid-size markets located in the various areas of the city including the Mission (El Chico Market, La Loma Market, Casa Maria, etc.), the Marina (Marina Supermarket), North Beach (Nature Stop), Hayes Valley (Haight and Fillmore Whole Foods), the Sunset (22nd and Irving Market, Noriega Produce), the Richmond (Del Rio Produce, New May Wah and Bryan's Market), Bernal Heights and Potrero Hill (Good Life Markets). Finally, Washington Vegetable is proud of its longtime relationship with many of the small “corner store” merchants who make up such an important part of the character of the San Francisco retail sector and are spread across all corners of the city.

Washington Vegetable also sells directly to numerous restaurants and restaurant groups such as Chubby Noodle in North Beach and the Marina, Espetus Churrasceria in Hayes Valley and Underdog Tacos in the Outer Sunset.

Lastly, Washington Vegetable sells to other members of the San Francisco Produce Market who may serve different functions. Cooks Company, which specializes in deliveries to restaurants, purchases produce from Washington Vegetable, as does Grub Market, a newer startup focusing on delivering produce to homes with a subscription model. Providing produce to companies like these expands the business’ reach even more and ensures that the SF Produce Market remains a vital part of the San Francisco food infrastructure.

g. Is the business associated with a culturally significant building/structure/site/object/interior?

Washington Vegetable Company is housed in the San Francisco Wholesale Produce Market, which is a Legacy Business.

h. How would the community be diminished if the business were to be sold, relocated, shut down, etc.?

If Washington Vegetable Company were sold, relocated or shut down, it would mean the loss of one of the largest and most established produce wholesalers located in the City and County of San Francisco. Many customers may be forced to go to larger distribution companies out of the Central Valley or Los Angeles to get their produce delivered, depriving San Francisco of increasingly rare blue-collar jobs.

It would also lose a company that has owners and employees with years of institutional knowledge about the produce industry as well as a space that serves as an informal meeting place for many in the grocery industry. On any given morning, you can find an incredibly diverse group of owners, produce buyers and truck drivers of locally owned groceries and restaurants meeting in the Washington Vegetable warehouse, trading stories about their businesses, communities and families.

a. Describe the business and the essential features that define its character.

Washington Vegetable is an old-school business, operating in an old-school industry, but doing so in a modern way while always keeping an eye toward the future. With a nod towards their past, Washington Vegetable is proud of the fact that many of the farmers who supply their produce have been their partners for decades. Similarly, many of its customers have been with Washington Vegetable for years and are treated like family. True to our founder's values, the smallest customer at Washington Vegetable has always been treated the same as the largest.

At a basic level, every morning the employees unload trucks of produce that come from a number of different states and countries. Throughout the morning, customers place orders via phone, email, text message or in person, and Washington Vegetable's employees assemble these orders and load them onto trucks when the customers come to pick up. Other orders are delivered directly to customers throughout the Bay Area. This all occurs in the early hours of the morning, primarily between midnight and 10 am.

Washington Vegetable has strived to keep track of industry trends and adapt their business accordingly. They were one of the first businesses in the San Francisco Produce Market to voluntarily adopt a food safety program to ensure that their product is stored, handled and distributed in a manner that meets rigorous food safety standards. Similarly, sensing a trend towards organic produce, Washington Vegetable opened a dedicated organic department, which continues to thrive and expand. Over a decade ago, Washington Vegetable began an export department that ships produce weekly to various customers in the South Pacific.

b. How does the business demonstrate a commitment to maintaining the historical traditions that define the business, and which of these traditions should not be changed in order to retain the businesses historical character? (e.g., business model, goods and services, craft, culinary, or art forms)

Washington Vegetable Company has made an active effort to remain in the San Francisco Produce Market, even as many of the original vendors from the old market either moved to the South San Francisco Produce Market or relocated to warehouses in other parts of the Bay Area. This commitment to the city of San Francisco was reinforced in the signing of a new long-term lease in 2013, one that will ensure they remain at the San Francisco Produce Terminal well into the future. Additionally, Washington Vegetable has remained true to its roots as a traditional produce wholesaler, providing vegetables to grocery stores and restaurants. This business model is in stark contrast to some of the newer start-ups like Grub and Blue Apron whose business models could result in a diminished viability of brick and mortar grocery stores around the city, which are traditionally large employers of local residents.

c. How has the business demonstrated a commitment to maintaining the special physical features that define the business? Describe any special exterior and interior physical characteristics of the space occupied by the business (e.g. signage, murals, architectural details, neon signs, etc.).

The business is part of The San Francisco Wholesale Produce Market in the Bayview District, an essential and longstanding part of the industrial and PDR (Production, Distribution, Repair) sectors of District 10. A visit to Washington Vegetable would reveal numerous photos, paintings and trinkets which pay homage to their past. They are especially proud of a large mural that was commissioned to a local artist that depicts Washington Vegetable as it looked in the old produce market. Additionally, the sign that hung above their stall at the old market now hangs on the side of their refrigerator.

d. When the current ownership is not the original owner and has owned the business for less than 30 years; the applicant will need to provide documentation that demonstrates the current owner has maintained the physical features or traditions that define the business, including craft, culinary, or art forms. Please use the list of supplemental documents and/or materials as a guide to help demonstrate the existence of the business prior to current ownership.

Documentation that demonstrates the business has been a wholesale produce business for 30+ years is included in this Legacy Business Registry application.

SAN FRANCISCO PRODUCE ASSOCIATION

ANNUAL MEETING OF DIRECTORS

FEBRUARY 17, 1988

The annual meeting of the Board of Directors of the San Francisco Produce Association (the "Association") was held on Wednesday, February 17, 1988. The meeting was called to order by John Pizza, the President of the Association, at 11:10 a.m. in the office of the Association.

In attendance were Messrs. Kelly, Lippi, Pizza, Sagara and Scola, representing a quorum. George Constant, the Secretary of the Association, was present by the invitation of the Directors. David Lipkin of Pettit & Martin, counsel to the Association, was also present at the invitation of the Directors.

Mr. Pizza asked Mr. Constant to read the minutes of the previous meeting of the Board of Directors. Upon motion duly made, seconded, and unanimously carried, the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting was waived and the minutes were approved as written.

Mr. Scola then nominated and the Board of Directors unanimously elected, the following persons to serve as the officers of the corporation for the coming year:

John Pizza	President
Otto Schalk	Vice President
Leonard Lippi	Chief Financial Officer
George Constant	Secretary and General Manager

Mr. Pizza then asked there were any more business to come before the meeting. There being none, upon motion duly made, seconded and unanimously carried, the meeting was adjourned at 11:30 a.m.

Mr. Richard Rosenberg, Chairman and CEO
Bank of America
P.O. Box 370000 Department 3117
San Francisco, CA 94104

Dear Mr. Rosenberg:

As the owner of Washington Vegetable and as President of the San Francisco Wholesale Produce Terminal Association, I am writing to urge you to keep the Produce Branch open.

When my father founded Washington Vegetable in 1931, he opened our account at Bank of America. When my brothers and I took over the business from him, we continued the relationship.

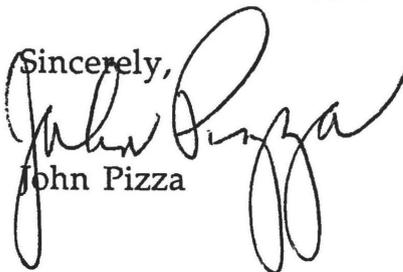

When the Wholesale Produce Terminal was established in 1962, Washington Vegetable was given account number 0004. All of my personal and business accounts have been with B of A.

So it came as something of a shock when the Bank recently announced its decision to close the Produce Branch. There was no notice. No discussion of alternatives. No respect for the loyalty we have demonstrated over three generations in business.

As a business owner, I am forced to ask: if you have no respect for the loyalty we have shown, why should we continue to bring our business to you?

As President of the Produce Terminal Association, I can only tell you that our member businesses have been B of A boosters since day one. We have always viewed the future of the Produce Terminal and the future of B of A as one and the same. Your decision to pull out hurts us badly. Now more than ever, we need to show our strength against our major competitors in South San Francisco and Oakland. If we can't show strength with B of A, I will move all of my business and personal accounts to another bank.

Sincerely,

John Pizza

San Francisco, CA 94124

Dear Mr. Pizza:

Thank you for your recent letter regarding the San Francisco Produce Branch which we have been reviewing for possible closure.

We are very sensitive to your concerns regarding the San Francisco Produce Branch and how its closure could affect your customers and other members of the San Francisco Wholesale Produce Terminal Association. The long-standing business relations we share with the Washington Vegetable Company and the Association are very important to us.

In response to our customers' concerns, we have decided not to close the San Francisco Produce Branch. We look forward to continuing to serve your banking needs there.

Thank you for your loyalty to Bank of America and that of your members. It is very important to us.

Sincerely,

Organic produce booming in Northern California

Tom Burfield

November 19, 2019

Organic fruits and vegetables can be big business in the Northern California market.

“Organic has been huge for us,” said Mike Pizza, who handles sales and administration for Washington Vegetable Co. on the San Francisco Wholesale Produce Market.

“We’ve been doing better than last year, and most of that growth has come from organics,” he said.

The company, which was established in 1931 and bills itself as “the oldest wholesale produce business located in the city and county of San Francisco,” offers an extensive variety of organic fruits and vegetables, including avocados, asparagus, carrots, celery, chard and kale as well as a selection of Earthbound Farm organic salads in bags and clamshell containers.

Some customers have ramped up their organic purchases from none at all or just a small amount to up to 70% of their produce offerings, Pizza said.

He takes time out on Wednesdays to visit various stores to try to pick up new business.

“The conversations I’ve had are almost solely focused on organics,” he said.

“We’ve developed great relationships with farmers, and we buy from bigger organic people like Lakeside Organic Gardens and Earthbound Farm as well as smaller farmers who are just getting off the ground,” he said.

There are “not a ton of options” for buyers in the market looking for organic produce, he said.

Some offer good but pricey organic products, while others offer items that are less costly but may not offer the highest quality, he said.

“We’re trying to hit the middle ground of affordable but good quality.”

He works to achieve that goal by building good relationships with local farmers, he said.

CDS Distributing Inc. in South San Francisco carries organic and conventional versions of just about everything in its product line, said Jan Garrett, vice president of marketing.

Some chains no longer offer conventional options for many commodities, he said, which is a shift from stores that offer both. But he’s not sure that’s always the best business plan.

“Even though prices have come down, some consumers still perceive that organic is more expensive, so for those value shoppers, it might not make sense for a retailer to just carry one,” he said.

Carcione’s Fresh Produce Co. Inc. at the Golden Gate Produce Terminal in South San Francisco is doing more and more organic business, said president Pete Carcione.

Buyers are looking for more organic items and farmers are growing more organic produce, he said.

“People want organic produce because it’s grown without pesticides, and it tastes better,” he said.

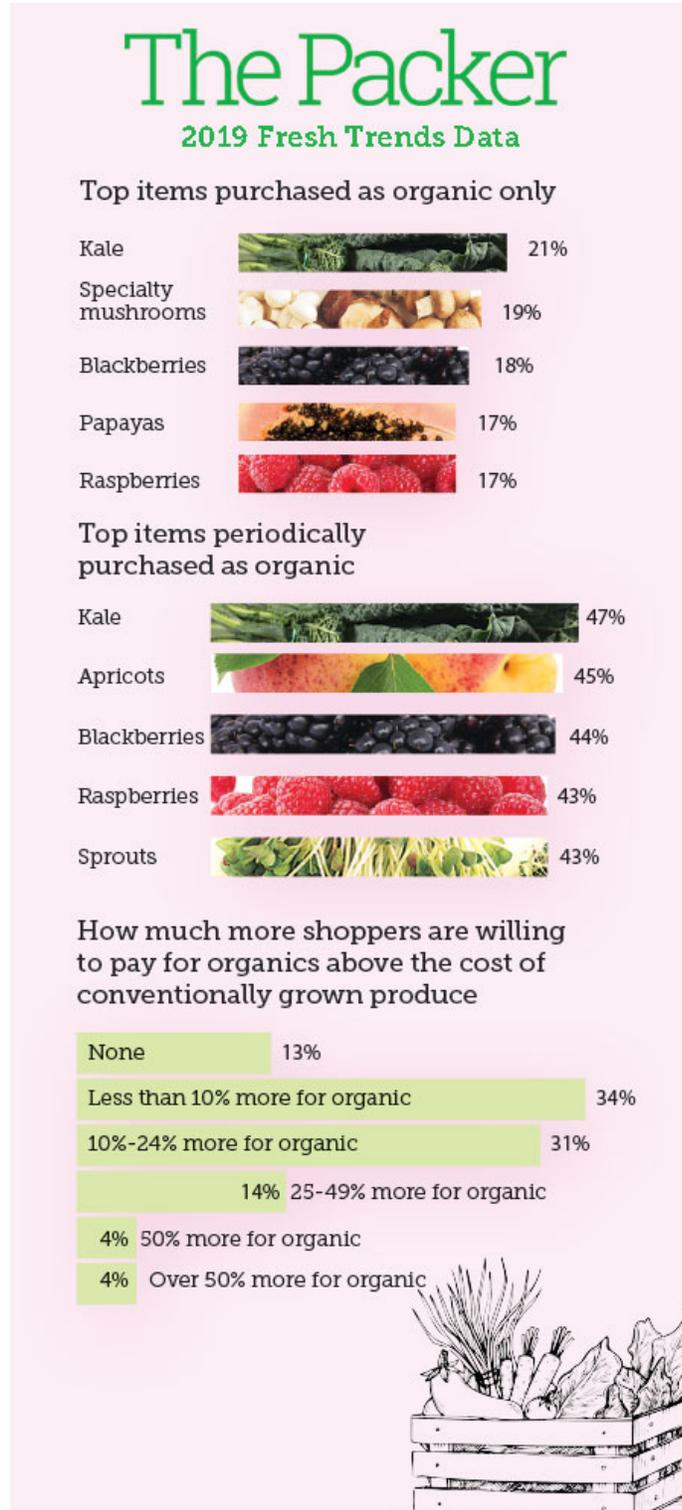

Farmers who grow organic products that are sold locally often eliminate the hydrocooling or vacuum cooling process, which lowers the temperature and stops the ripening process, he said.

Products like peaches and strawberries that continue to ripen will give off a pleasant aroma in the supermarket, he said.

Washington Vegetable Co. has been expanding its organic business a lot over the past four years and plans to increase it even more, Pizza said.

He estimates that 15% to 20% of the company's products are organically grown. Just two years ago, that figure was about 5%.

Many customers, like Berkeley Bowl and Gus's Community markets, are all or mostly organic, he said.

At CDS, Garrett said demand for organic produce has been on the rise.

Three years ago, when she started at the company, there were not nearly as many organic items available as there are today, she said.

Now, in the apple category alone, just about every variety is available organically.

CDS Distributing is the exclusive distributor for Harmony brand organic heirloom apples, pears, cherries and stone fruit.

The Packer's Global Organic Produce Exposition & Conference \(GOPEX\) provides a forum to meet the rapidly changing needs of professionals who grow, distribute, pack and market organic produce. This international trade show and conference provides the ideal opportunity for organic produce professionals from around the world to network, exchange ideas, source new products and services, and do business with the industry's leading growers, distributors, packers, marketers and retailers.

Recommendation: Adopt a Resolution to Recommend Approval

Business Description

In 1931, after immigrating from Collodi, Italy and working as a laborer for over a decade at the (no longer extant) San Francisco Wholesale Produce Market, Pietro Dante Pizza decided to open his own wholesale produce business at 217 Washington Street, and named it the Washington Vegetable Company after the street on which it was located. Pizza had three sons – John, Louis, and Renato – who worked in the mornings, before going to school, and would later return from WWII to work full-time in the family business. The business was growing and in 1956, the company moved to a larger warehouse at 135-137 Washington Street (which is now the site of Maritime Plaza Park). Less than a decade later, the Golden Gateway Redevelopment Project was approved, and the merchants of the old Produce Market had to find new real estate for their wholesale operations. Many merchants chose to leave the city and open the Golden Gate Produce Terminal in South San Francisco, but Washington Vegetable Company felt strongly about staying in the city. Washington Vegetable, among a handful of other produce dealers, relocated to Jerrold Avenue where the company has remained for the last 57 years. Washington Vegetable's dedication and perseverance to San Francisco's wholesale produce and family-owned operations is evident in its ownership history. The company has stayed in the Pizza family and is currently in its third generation of ownership, and fourth generation of family-member operations.

Since the early part of the 20th century, the wholesale produce merchants of San Francisco have been the primary source of fresh fruits and vegetables for the city and the Bay Area at large. The city's close proximity to some of the most productive produce growing regions in the country (Salinas, Central Valley, etc.) has helped form the Bay Area's identity as one of the culinary capitals of the world and a place on the cutting edge of many healthy, plant-based food trends. Washington Vegetable is one of the oldest members of the San Francisco Wholesale Produce Market and has a strong relationship with the area's local-based grocers and restaurants. Their regular customer base in San Francisco includes Gus's Community Markets, Mollie Stones, El Chico Market, La Loma Market, Casa Maria, Marina Supermarket, Nature Stop, Hayes Valley Whole Foods, 22nd and Irving Market, Noriega Produce, Del Rio Produce, New May Wah, Brayan's Market, the Good Life Markets, Chubby Noodle, Espetus Churrasceria, and Underdog Tacos; in addition to numerous corner store merchants, startup subscription companies, and stores outside of San Francisco (such as Berkeley Bowl).

Washington Vegetable is been dedicated to supporting and supplying the high-end culinary traditions of San Francisco's well-known food scene. However, Washington Vegetable also philanthropically recognizing food as a vital source of life for those in need. The Washington Vegetable Company feels strongly about giving back to the community and regularly donates fresh fruits and vegetables to a variety of charities and food banks, including the SF-Marin Food Bank, the Little Sisters of the Pool, a number of Bayview-based food distribution centers, and the new Navigation center that recently opened down the street from the business. Since it began the Food Recovery Program in 2016, Washington Vegetable has donated 145, 692 pounds of produce to those in need.

Washington Vegetable is one of the largest produce wholesalers in San Francisco and its supply of fresh fruit and vegetables fuels the cultural heritage of San Francisco's foodways. The business's location at 2035 Jerrold Avenue is a Category "B" (Unknown / Age Eligible) structure on the southwest side of Jerrold between Selby Street and Milton I Ross Lane in District 10's Bayview neighborhood. It is within the Bayview Hunters Point Redevelopment Area (Area B, Zone 2, Expires 2036), the Bayview Hunters Point Planning Area, an Industrial Protection Zone Special use District, a PDR-2 (Production, Distribution, and Repair) Zoning District, and a 80-E Height and Bulk District.

Staff Analysis

Review Criteria
